

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

An Index to 'Bird-Lore.'¹— To those who have had occasion to compile information upon any species of bird or upon the birds of any State the need of an index to 'Bird-Lore' has at once been apparent. Only by going over the index or contents of each volume separately could the vast store of data contained in this journal be made available. We were therefore prepared to welcome any general index that might appear and the one that has been compiled by Mr. Ernest Ingersoll and published by the National Association of Audubon Societies, will doubtless meet the requirements of the majority of those who will use it. Unfortunately, however, when compared with the two indexes to 'The Auk' compiled respectively under the direction of Drs. Jonathan Dwight, and Theodore S. Palmer, it falls far below their standard of excellence.

A perusal of a few pages shows an evident lack of system in the compilation. Of two titles 'Photographing a Ruffed Grouse' and 'Photographing a Virginia Rail' for example, one is indexed under 'photographing' the other under 'Virginia,' though we find references also under 'Grouse' and 'Rail.' Two others, 'A Crow Study' and 'A Hermit Thrush in Winter' appear respectively under 'a' and 'Hermit,' and we fail to find the latter under 'Thrush' where the other references to the species occur. While it is the evident intention to index each article under the author and the bird of which it treats, we find that in many cases one reference or the other has been omitted. However indexes are thankless jobs and the present one will answer the purposes of the majority of those who use it, and be a great help to all. But it seems unfortunate that where so much effort has been expended, a little more care was not exercised. A series of page references to papers relating to the birds of each State and country would also have been a welcome addition.— W. S.

A Bibliography of British Ornithology.²— For thirty-six years the only work dealing solely with the bibliography of British Ornithology has been the fourth installment of Dr. Coues' famous 'Ornithological Bibliography.' The present work by W. H. Mullen and H. Kirke Swann is much more pretentious than that of Dr. Coues and is arranged on a different plan. It contains biographical sketches of most of the authors, which

¹ An Index to Bird-Lore. Volumes I to XV, inclusive, containing a Reference to Every Contributor, Article and Topic; an Analytic Index to the Colored Plates and other Illustrations; and an Index to Books and Periodicals Reviewed. Compiled by Ernest Ingersoll. For sale by the National Association of Audubon Societies, 1974 Broadway, New York City. 1916. Price 50 cents.

² A Bibliography of British Ornithology from the Earliest Times to the End of 1912. Including Biographical Accounts of the Principal Writers and Bibliographies of their Published Works. By W. H. Mullen, M. A., LL.M., F. L. S., M. B. O. U. and H. Kirke Swann. "Let no man who writes a book presume to say when he will have finished. When he imagines that he is drawing near to his journey's end, Alps rise on Alps, and he continually finds something to add and something to correct." MacMillan and Co., Limited, St. Martin's Street, London. 1916. 8vo. Pt. 1. pp. 1-112, 6/net. To be completed in about six bi-monthly Parts.